

I am writing in reference to the above proposed bill. I am satisfied with the current Indiana Telephone Privacy law and it's protection. A new federal law that lessens the protection of Indiana's current law would be unacceptable. Under the current Indiana law, my time at home has been much more peaceful. I used to get as much as 20 or more calls per day starting at around 8:30am and lasting until around 9:00pm. Needless to say, when you work night shift this can be VERY anoying. Since I work in EMS and law enforcement, I have to have a phone available in case I'm called in. Now I receive maybe 1 call per week. I believe the state of Indiana has taken the proper steps to protect it's citizens and I don't believe that the federal government needs to step in and fix something that is working well just because a few companies are complaining.
